Incident 8

Soekah sits on the elephant. A lowered branch of a tree enables her to swing off the moving elephant. While Garbo does, she creeps down a vine and hurries back.

A dog barks at Hano's horses. One of the horses breaks loose and gallops away. Soekah catches it, mounts and rides back. The inn is on fire. A man captures her, but she stuns him by hitting him on the head with a rock, gallops up to the rear of the inn, climbs upon a low roof. A courtyard separates her from the burning building. She loops her lasso over the top of the cupola on the tower, swings across the courtyard and lowers herself to the ground. The rope is in front of a window in the tower and Stanley and Michael slide down. The rope burns just as they reach the ground. Then they enter the one door, to find a den of wild leopards.

The tower burns and crashes down behind them, barring their way back into the courtyard. Stanley stands on Michael's shoulders, reaches a beam - they pull the others up and climb out a skylight, as the leopards leap to tear them to pieces. They climb down the roof and escape.

Hano and his men discover their escape and give chase. Garbo discovers Soekah missing from his elephant, forms a small band on their horses and return in pursuit.

The fugitives are hemmed in - turn at right angles and
